New Allsteel Member to Lead Company's Sustainable Efforts and Ongoing Environmental Initiatives

Muscatine, IA – November, 2006 – Allsteel, a leading contract furniture designer and manufacturer, recently announced the addition of Keri Luly as stewardship coordinator. The announcement was made by Mark Rounfort, Vice President, Product Development.

In her new role, Luly will be responsible for developing and executing the strategies and initiatives Allsteel undertakes to reduce negative environmental impacts in the workplace. She will also assist in internal and external training and education to raise awareness and understanding of environmental performance, and promote new sustainability initiatives within and by Allsteel.

Although the role of stewardship coordinator is new to Allsteel, embracing environmental responsibility is not. Previously, Allsteel has been awarded the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Environmental Excellence Award, the GSA Evergreen award and other state awards for its accomplishments.

“Allsteel has demonstrated its ongoing leadership in a number of industry firsts: the development of Environmental Data Sheets (EDS), introduction of PLA corn-based panel fabric, and the first contract office furniture manufacturer to participate in Scientific Certification System’s Indoor Advantage air quality certification program, to name a few,” said Roumfort. “Keri brings extensive experience in working with government agencies, manufacturers and non-profit environmental groups in both the United States and Asia. By having helped them innovate and expand their work in sustainable development, we feel she will be a great complement to our ongoing programs,” continued Roumfort.

Luly’s impressive track record made her the perfect candidate to lead Allsteel’s environmental responsibility initiatives. She has significant experience in the field of environmental excellence, including serving as president of an environmental consulting practice, deputy manager at Illinois EPA’s Office of Pollution Prevention, a member of the Board of Directors of the Multi-State Working Group on Environmental Performance, senior policy advisor to the U.S.-Asia Environmental Partnership program, chair of the U.S. Green Building Council’s Central Illinois Chapter, a LEED Accredited Professional and a Qualified Commissioning Process Provider.
